The Opportunity of the Hour Is Yours

If you are only prepared to grasp it. A business education is the key to the situation.

The Demand for Office Help in San Francisco has never been so great within the last ten years as now.

Applications for Our Graduates for Positions continue to pour in upon us from business men far beyond our capacity to supply. During the last thirty days we have averaged per school day, 1½ applicants for our graduates.

Reason—Our College has established a reputation for thoroughness that has inspired confidence among business men in the integrity of our work.

A Position Will Be Secured for You just as soon as you become proficient enough to pass our "Examinations for Positions." (You can not get your recommendation unless you come up to the standard; but when you get it, it means something.)

Come to the City—Business is done today at short range. We are right here on the ground where the business of the Coast is done, and keep in such close touch with business men that we secure positions for all our graduates; whereas it is only at rare intervals that country colleges can secure a position for a graduate.

Course of Instruction—(a) Business Course, Bookkeeping, Penmanship, Commercial Law, Rapid Calculation, Business Arithmetic, Business Correspondence, Actual Business Practice, Office Experience, Shorthand (Bonn Pitman), Typewriting (touch method), English, Spelling, Punctuation, Machine Dictation, Reporting in City Courts, Composition, Paragraphing, Memorizing and Carbon Dictation, Letter Press Copying.

PRESIDENT M'KINLEY'S FAVORITE HYMNS.

Thousands of voices, through many years, have been raised in melodious utterance of the beautiful words of "Lead, Kindly Light" and "Nearer, My God, to Thee," but probably never before have these hymns been sung with such a depth of feeling and such a fullness of meaning as during the days following the death of President McKinley. Ever dear, the fact that they were the favorites of the martyred President around whose bier a nation mourned has made them more than ever precious. Bands of music played the notes in solemn dirge and in the churches of the land organs pealed forth the touching strains and lips uttered the words, while the mind dwelt upon the scene where the spirit of William McKinley went out in sublime submission to the will of the Master.

How trustfully he yielded himself to the guiding hand of the Universe! Into the Great Beyond he passed, in the spirit so beautifully expressed by Cardinal Newman's hymn:

Lead Kindly Light, amid the encircling gloom,
Lead Thou me on!
The night is dark, and I am far from home—
Lead Thou me on!
Keep Thou my feet; I do not ask to see
The distant scene—One step enough for me.

I was not ever thus, nor prayed that Thou shouldst lead me on;
I loved to choose and see my path; but now Lead Thou me on!
I loved the garish day, and, spite of fears,
Pride ruled my will, remember not past years.

PASSING.
Low in the West the daylight dips,
While by the pool the Summer stands,
With stain of purple on her lips
And scarlet flowers in her hands.

Within the watery mirror there,
Narcissus-like she sees her face,
So pale, so sweet, so mortal fair,
And lingers spellbound by its grace.

The morning red is vanished now,
The splendor of the noon is gone,
And, like a veil on cheek and brow,
The wreathed mist is clinging wan.

A breath from meadows shorn exhales,
A sigh goes down the forest ways,
The dryads of the woody valleys
Are mourning for the passing days.

And Summer hears the warning note,
As by the reedy pools she stands,
Her fading tresses all aloft
And scarlet flowers in her hands.
—St. Louis Mirror.

Briarsmere.
ESME BARTON, as she rode along on her trusty little cob, paid no heed to the weather, so absorbed was she in her own thoughts.

Ralph Underwood was coming that night to ask her to be his wife, she felt sure, for his manner at the Fletchers' dance had been unmistakable.

What answer should she give him?

She could never love a man she did not altogether trust?

Ah, if only Jack could speak she knew what answer she would give if he ever asked the same question, but Jack never would, now, though years ago he had shown in a hundred little ways that he loved her.

But that was before his father died, and Briarsmere was found to be mortgaged and all the affairs terribly involved. So now Jack was a poor man, and had even undertaken work as Underwood's agent to pay off the mortgage, which Ralph held.

Esme was rich, and could do as she liked with the fortune she had inherited from her mother, but was powerless to help Jack because of that unwritten law that "a man is to woo, a woman to be wooed."

The rain poured down and at last awoke Esme to a sense of what was going on around her.

The rain was coming down in torrents, and an ominous roll of thunder in the distance made Beauty tremble.

It was a lonely part of the road; only a little cabin, much out of repair, was in sight. She hastened toward it, not knowing if Mrs. O'Grady still occupied the place, or whether she had already gone to live with her sister in Kerry.

On trying to lift the latch, Esme found it was locked, but discovered a shelter in the peat shed at the back.

As she stood there caressing her horse to allay its fears, she was startled to hear a key fitted into the lock of the door in front of the house.

"The boards of the mud-covered walls were ill-fitted and rotten, and Esme could distinctly hear two men talking as they entered and shook the water from their clothes.

"A good thing we are here so near the place," said Underwood.

"Yes," answered a voice which made Esme blush in the semi-darkness, "it is a bad storm, but it will soon be over. I am not sorry it has come now, as you will see that something must be done to the place before another tenant occupies it. It isn't fit for a dog to live in."

"I shall do nothing; it's no use spending money on property of this kind. These peasants are used to pigging it. Leave the place alone."

"That is, of course, your affair, Mr. Underwood," said Jack. "In my position as agent it was my duty to point out to you what was needed, but I cannot make you do it. Only I tell you as man to man, that the neglect of your tenant's interests is a disgrace to the neighborhood. I have worked as your agent in order to work off the mortgage which you hold on my property, but I suppose the foreclosure which you threaten must come, for I cannot work for you any longer and have not money to redeem the estate."

"And, pray, why am I to lose your valuable services?" said Underwood.

"You know that during my management your profits have nearly doubled, but when it comes to distilling liquors in underground distilleries and expecting me to be a party to the fraud, I draw the line."

"How dare you speak like this to me!" said Underwood, choking with rage. "You pauper, if I had not employed you, you would have starved."

"You are exaggerating my poverty," said Jack, in a calm tone. "It is true, by honest work I hoped to regain my property, but when you expect dishonest work, you have come to the wrong man."

"By the way," continued Jack, and Esme could hardly catch his words, for he was already on the road. "I have ordered back the pipes and stills."

"The dickens you have," roared Underwood, as he paced the miserable room.

A quarter of an hour later Esme was in the cozy office of her friend and adviser, Mr. Rance.

"It is a large sum of money to invest in landed property, Miss Esme."

"I know," said the girl, in her quick, bright way, "but what does that matter? I have ever so much more when that is spent. Besides I happen to know the mortgage will be foreclosed if this money is not paid, and I have other reasons as well."

Beauty trotting along in the twilight was within a mile of her own warm stable, when she suddenly averted from a dark figure walking rapidly in the shadow.

Esme, who had been sitting lightly in the saddle, thinking over her afternoon's work, was taken unawares and flung to the ground.

Stooping over her, Jack—for it was he who had unwittingly frightened the cob—lifted her quickly in his arms. She was dazed and stunned, and as her head rested on his shoulder he stooped, and pressing his lips to hers stole the kiss that he had never dared to hope would be his by right.

"Esme," he said, after a pause, in which each read the other's heart, "I never dared to hope that you had given me your love, and I have no right to ask you to be my wife, for in a few weeks I shall have no home. Briarsmere is no longer mine. I kissed you because I could not help it as you lay in

FRIDAY, NOV. 1, 1901

President Roosevelt at the very outset gave it to be understood that he despises sectionalism and will have none of it. He said to Senator Pritchard recently: "I am going to be President of the United States, and not of any section. I don't care for sections or sectional lines. When I was Governor of New York I was told I could make four appointments in the army. When I sent in the names, three were from the South and the other from New York. They were brave men who deserved recognition for services in the Spanish war, and it didn't matter what States they were from."

That has the right ring. It comes with peculiar force from the Chief Executive of the Nation. It indicates a broad, tolerant and determined just spirit. It means that the new President will know neither South, nor North, nor East, nor West, but the whole country, irrespective of formed political or geographical distinctions.

Such a declaration means a greater measure of political harmony, a broader patriotism and a more tolerant spirit among all the people. The courage of the new President in acting upon the declaration we have quoted was manifested the other day when he called Booker T. Washington into council concerning the race problem in the South. It was further manifest when he dared to break bread with that distinguished, broadminded and conservative representative of the colored people of the Nation.

In the veins of President Roosevelt runs the sturdy blood of a Northern father, and of a devoted Southern mother; of a sturdy ancestry that went out into the world to accomplish its commercial conquest, that settled the banks of the Hudson and was largely instrumental in making the republic a possibility. Such a man ought to and will exercise a powerful influence for good, peace, prosperity and unity and the highest, greatest good of the whole country, upon national legislation.

DEATH OF WELL KNOWN INDIAN.

A remarkable Indian, known and esteemed all over Sonoma valley and into the adjoining country reaching over into Napa county on the east and to Petaluma on the west, died on the Champlain ranch Tuesday and was given a decent burial by Mr. and Mrs. Champlain Wednesday. The Indian was Jack Gilpin, a full-blooded Shasta red man. He was taken to San Francisco from Shasta when but a baby and there he was traded off for a pair of saddle blankets. For years the Indian boy lived at the famous old Nantico hotel, the old Frisco hostelry built out of the stranded hulk of a vessel. As the Indian grew to be a young man it became his turn as a benefactor. The hotel man was a Mr. Parrish and he treated the Indian with kindness. Coming home from an Oregon visit Parrish lost his life in the wreck of the Brother Jonathan. This left Mrs. Parrish almost destitute with two small boys, but Jack Gilpin returned former kindnesses a hundred fold by working for the widow and the baby boys. He made a living for all until the mother's reason deserted her and she was sent to the Stockton asylum. The boys were placed in an orphanage but not for long. Gilpin wanted the boys in private homes and worked till he achieved his ends. Then for years he worked on, devoting his money to them. The boys are now grown men, working in San Francisco. In some way the Indian drifted to Sonoma county and for nearly thirty years he was a member of some branch of the Champlain family.—Democrat

To Clean Oil Paintings.

An art journal suggests raw potatoes to clean oil paintings. Have a few potatoes at hand, each cut in halves; the fresh surface is dampened slightly with cold water and used to rub the canvas; as the potatoes show soil the surface is sliced off and the rubbing continued. This process will create a little lather, which should be wiped off as fast as it accumulates with a clean, damp sponge. When the whole canvas is cleaned, it should be washed over lightly with clean water, from which the chill is taken off, and finally the water lightly and carefully wiped off with an old clean silk handkerchief.

For Fall Housecleaning.

One method of cleaning carpets which has been pronounced in every way satisfactory is to make a suds with good white soap and hot water, adding enough fuller's earth to secure the consistency of thin cream. Then, after providing a number of clean cloths, a scrubbing brush, a large sponge and a bucket of fresh water, pour some of the cleaning mixture into a bowl, dip the brush into it and brush a small piece of the carpet at a time, washing it with the sponge and cold water and drying with the cloths. When it has all been gone over in this way, let it dry.

For Stair Landings.

In most houses now being built the staircase is likely to be broken by a landing after a few steps. An effective way to make use of the lower rail is to make it the back support of a high settee. The seat to this should be rounded out in front and be provided with a cushion covered with some velvety fabric like velours or corduroy. The support for the seat should match the wood and design of the staircase. One seen fitted against a dark rail had a dull red cushion that was extremely effective.

Washing Lace Handkerchiefs.

By putting lace handkerchiefs in warm water in which are a few drops of ammonia and using castle soap they are easily washed and made a beautiful clear white. They do not iron, but spread the handkerchief out smoothly on marble or glass, gently pulling out or shaping the lace. Just before it is entirely dry fold evenly and smoothly and place under a heavy weight of some kind, and you will find handkerchiefs lasting thrice as long as before.

A Combination Salad.

A satisfactory combination of fruit and savory salad is made with pineapple, celery and a bit of sweet red pepper. A small ripe pineapple is peeled and shredded and a cup of finely chopped celery and diced red pepper mixed with it. Marinate this with a little French dressing and set on ice for fifteen minutes; then toss through it with a silver fork a little mayonnaise first and afterward a half cupful of stiffly whipped cream. Arrange on lettuce hearts.

To Polish.

The best thing for polishing windows is a small hand mop made of scraps of chamois. Pieces no larger than a dollar can be used, and if well worn it will work so much the better. String them all together on a piece of strong twine, then tie together in a bunch. When dirty, wash it out, dry and before using rub it soft beneath your hands.—Good Housekeeping.

FOR THE LITTLE ONES.

Three Little Fairies That Met in the Garden One Morning.

Three little fairies met one morning in a garden of pinks. Their names were Dewdrop, Misty and Sunbeam. Funny little fairies they were too. Why, Dewdrop was so round, with his legs and arms all doubled up beside him, that I wonder how he could have perched where he did at all, but when Misty came along she found the little fellow sitting on the fringed flower leaf of a pink, so he must have got there in some way in the morning, for he wasn't in the garden the night before. Dewdrop looked lonely some until Misty came, then he brightened up till even his shiny coat looked like silver. Misty seemed just ready to smile at him, and the more she looked that way the brighter he became.

Suddenly they both laughed. Dewdrop was so pleased that his coat flashed out in colors of red, blue, green and yellow, for just then Sunbeam came into the garden, happy and singing, like the robin and the mocking bird, all at once.

"Good morning, Dewdrop," and "Good morning, Misty," she said. "Don't you want to warm your cold toes this morning?"

Misty began to fly around as much as to say she could keep her toes warm herself. Fat little Dewdrop looked over the great beds of pinks, shaking himself and smiling, but saying nothing.

In those days the sweet pinks we have in our gardens had no more smell to them than a garden of pansies have now, so these three fairies could only look over the pretty posies and enjoy their color.

By and by Misty began to be thinner and thinner. Little chubby Dewdrop began to look very queer indeed. His round body clung so close to the pink leaf that it was no longer round. The two fairies were becoming unhappy, knowing that they must soon leave.

"Won't you please go away, Sunbeam?" they asked. "You are drying us all up."

"I can't go now," gayly smiled Sunbeam, for she never can look unhappy, but has to look glad in the garden until night. "But as the other fairies say, you must go away. Please come to see me again tomorrow morning, little friends."

Then Sunbeam danced over the garden. The fairies in the air came and took away Dewdrop and Misty so they might prepare for their next visit.

"How I will please them when they come again," said Sunbeam, looking over the pink blossoms. "Then they will have a happier time while they are allowed to stay."

So the smiling fairy kissed each pretty flower and each pink became scented with sweet perfume, and now when Dewdrop and Misty come into the garden they are greeted with the fresh, sweet odor of the pinks as you smell them in your mother's flower bed every summer.—Willis Edwin Hurd.

King Edward's Children.

The king has brought up his children in the utmost simplicity, and it is with his assent that the Duke and Duchess of Cornwall and York allow their little ones to make friends among the children of members of the aristocracy. A tea party in the nurseries of York House is a common event, and the little princes and princesses squabble and fight with future dukes and marquises over picture books and tin soldiers.

One little son of nobility, whom it pleased his mother to dress in the embroideries and laces of a baby until he was nearly four years old, one day got a rare drubbing from little Prince Edward, who, on being introduced to his befrilled and be-ribboned small guest, promptly knocked him down.—Home Notes.

Singing by Note.

I am learning to sing by note, as you see; The birds and the wire make a score for me.

The Squirrel's Arithmetic.
High on the branch of a walnut tree
A bright eyed squirrel sat;
What was he thinking so earnestly,
And what was he looking at?

He was doing a problem over and over,
Bully thinking was he
How many nuts for his winter's store
Could he hide in the hollow tree.

He sat so still in the swaying bough
You might have thought him asleep;
Oh, no! he was trying to reason now
The nuts the ladies could eat.

Then, suddenly he frisked about,
And down the tree he ran;
"The best way to do, without a doubt,
Is to gather all I can."—Normal Instructor.

Earning Their Fee.

Recently an Indianapolis jury brought in a verdict of guilty against a woman charged with profanity, and then paid the fine imposed upon her themselves. At first it was supposed that they were influenced by gallantry, until it was revealed that their own fees for service in the jury box depended upon a conviction. For superlative nerve that jury is entitled to the blue ribbon.—San Francisco Chronicle.

ALL OVER THE HOUSE.

How to Arrange Cut Flowers to Secure Pleasing Effects.

In order to secure the best and most pleasing effects in the arrangement of cut flowers it is necessary that their manner of growth be considered. Flowers that grow on tall stalks should be put in high vases, which permit the long green stems to rise in a natural fashion, with some of the pretty leaves appearing gracefully among them. Tiny flowers should be placed in small receptacles corresponding to their size. The aim should be to give, as far as possible, a natural appearance to each kind of flower.

When gathering field daisies, also gather some of the seed grasses that grow among them, then place all loosely in a suitable vase, remembering that they do not grow with their heads close together. This arrangement, with the help of a stretch of the imagination, will remind one of a small field of daisies with the grasses waving and nodding in the wind.

Roses should not be crowded into a vase, but tumbled loosely into a bowl, and a little study will enable one to add the necessary touches that help to give to these beautiful cut flowers their natural grace and beauty.

Pansies should be cut with stems and leaves and massed in a low, flaring vase, where they have a chance to appear as if still growing.

LOUBET'S QUEER TROUSERS.

President Loubet has five Prince Albert coats—two for summer, two for winter and one extra for grand occasions. This last one has been worn only three times—at the opening of the exposition of 1900, at the reception of the king of Sweden and at the garden party in honor of the shah of Persia. This "gala" coat differs from the others in that it has heavy silk lining and lapels. M. Loubet invariably wears a plain, black satin tie—not tied by hand, but sewed together and attached with a clasp. M. Loubet used formerly to wear false cuffs, but one day while making a sudden gesture the right hand cuff slipped off and rolled on the floor. This happened at the Luxembourg palace, when M. Loubet was president of the senate. Since then M. Loubet's shirts have been made with permanently attached wristbands.

M. Loubet's trousers are very peculiar. They are black or gray in color, but their cut is of the old fashioned pattern, with the top of the trousers coming up as high as the armpits. M. Loubet has always worn trousers of this quaint type, and is so accustomed to them that he has an inveterate dislike for evening clothes, which, with low cut, open waistcoat, render the arm-pit trousers impossible. The president's wardrobe is, however, provided with several pairs of evening trousers suitable for low cut, open waistcoats.—Argonaut.

Built With Tomato Cans.

A remarkable little building stands on the lawn of Dr. Nauman H. Keyser's house on Church lane, Germantown. It was erected by Dr. Keyser himself when a boy, some addition or alteration being made to it each year during his vacation.

The architecture of the quaint little building is old English. The lower part is wooden, and the upper part has the effect of tiling, the tiles being made out of old tin cans. The youthful architect persuaded the boys of the neighborhood to collect cans from the various dumps, 1,000 of them being used on the building. The bottoms of the cans blocked over wood formed circular tiles, with which the roof is covered, and the remainder of the tin, being beaten out flat and also blocked, made square tiles for the upper part of the walls.—Philadelphia Record.

Anarchy In France.

An item of news from Paris gives indications of serious conditions in France. A party of soldiers, reserves, openly cheered anarchy and shouted for social revolution. When the police attempted to quell the disorder, they were charged upon by the soldiers and overcome. Paris lives in constant dread of a resurgence of the commune. It is small wonder. When the red chapter of history was written by the commune, the army was not so possessed of anarchistic doctrine as at present. The commune sprang mainly from obscure streets and byways, but at present anarchy stalks openly upon the boulevards of the gay capital, finds lodgment in the arsenals and expression in the military barracks.—Pittsburg Dispatch.

Windmill Electricity.

Electric energy from wind has been successfully obtained in both England and Germany, but it is in the latter country that it has been actually put into use. M. G. Couz of Hamburg used a windmill with a regulator, which would keep its speed constant, no matter what the speed of the wind was, and succeeded so well that there is a strong probability that it will be used in small villages in Germany and supply light and power at a small cost.

An Unpleasant Relative.

"Her rich old uncle isn't a bit nice to her, is he?"
"Nice! He's horrid! Why, he threatens her awfully!"
"Threatens her?"
"Yes, threatens to leave all his money to a hospital for asthmatic cats."—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Sympathy may help a wounded heart but it won't heal a wounded limb.

That fact is so obvious that you wonder why any one can offer "sympathy" as the chief feature of treatment for the delicate diseases of women. Yet women are invited to "write to a woman who can sympathize with woman," and the theme of their correspondence is to be the delicate, difficult and dangerous diseases which undermine a woman's health and strength. It is true that such offers are combined with an offer of "medical advice." But medical advice can only be given by a competent physician, and no mention is made in such offers of a physician's or doctor's advice. It is not offered because it cannot be given. The offer is not being made by a qualified physician.

The offer of free consultation by letter, made to ailing women by Dr. R. V. Pierce, has behind it a physician's ability. Dr. Pierce is consulting physician of the Invalids' Hotel and Surgical Institute, Buffalo, N. Y. Associated with Dr. Pierce is a staff of nearly a score of physicians, each man a specialist. In a practice of over thirty years Dr. Pierce and his staff have treated successfully more than half a million women, who have been cured of debilitating drains, inflammations, ulcerations and female troubles. The age, experience and skill of Dr. Pierce give him a supreme advantage in his chosen field of diseases of women.

You can write to Dr. Pierce without fear and without fee. Every letter is read privately and answered confidentially, the answer being sent in a plain envelope, without any printing upon it.

Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription, has been gratefully named "a God send to women," by those who have been cured by its use. It is a medicine specially prepared for woman's use. It regulates the periods, checks unhealthy drains, heals inflammation and ulceration and cures female weakness.

BOARD MEETING AT NAPA.

Judge R. M. Swain returned to Santa Rosa Monday evening from Napa, where he attended an adjourned meeting of the board of directors of the Napa State hospital.

A peculiar feature of the session of the board is that it convened at one o'clock Monday morning. The hospital carpenter was called and under the supervision of the board, placed padlocks on the entrances to the medical office in the main building. The same thing was done Tuesday to the superintendent's residence during the absence of the deposed superintendent, Dr. Gardner. Though Dr. Gardner removed his family last week he remained in the house and retained the keys to the office. At a previous meeting of the board his supplies were cut off.

Dr. L. F. Dozier, the new medical superintendent, has been assistant for twenty-seven years. He is a brother of Prof. Melville Dozier, formerly principal of the Santa Rosa schools.

Dr. Gardner through his attorney, Edward J. Livernash, has applied to Attorney General T. L. Ford for right to sue Dr. Dozier in the name of the people of the state of California.—Republican

Ask some business man for an advertisement or some locals and they'd say they don't believe in advertising, as a paper is never (hardly ever) read. But let that man be caught kissing his neighbor's wife, and his tone instantly changes, and if the printing office is in the garret of a seventeen story building, he will climb to the top and plead with the editor to keep quiet and not publish his misdoings. By experience we know whereof we speak.—Middleton Independent.

People who know Editor Read would not believe him guilty of kissing his neighbor's wife, or that he would climb a seventeen story building to plead for mercy; therefore his confession that he has had "experience" in such matters comes as a great shock. Perhaps, however, we have misinterpreted his meaning.

OFFICERS ELECTED.

It takes more than a hard rain to dampen the ardor of the members of the Woman's Club of Sonoma Valley. In spite of a very rainy afternoon a large number of ladies attended the meeting on Saturday in Odd Fellows' Hall, the purpose of which was to elect the officers of the club. After a very interesting contest the following officers were elected.

President—Mrs. Stearns.
First Vice-President—Mrs. R. Hill.
Second Vice-President—Mrs. McHarvey.
Recording Secretary—Miss A. Humphreys.
Corresponding Secretary—Miss Mattie Goodman.
Treasurer—Mrs. Clewe.
Directors—Mrs. Weems, Mrs. Granice, Mrs. Enos.

The members of the Executive Board held their first meeting at the home of Mrs. F. Clewe on Monday of this week. The following committees were then appointed.

Sanitary—Mrs. Enos, Mrs. G. H. Hotz, Miss Angillon.
Plaza—Mrs. Granice, Mrs. Empan, Mrs. Quartaroli.
Streets—Mrs. B. F. Campbell, Mrs. Merriam, Mrs. Baines.
Entertainment—Mrs. Weems, Mrs. Appleton, Mrs. Harris.
Music—Mrs. Walliser, Mrs. D. Duhning, Mrs. Clewe.
Literary—Mrs. Hill, Mrs. Weed, Miss Goodman.

Social—Mrs. Pauline McMullen, Mrs. Dorman, Miss C. Granice, Miss D. Clewe, Miss K. McDonnell, Mrs. Clara Johnson.

The club has now enrolled sixty-two members and is constantly adding new names to its membership.

Two meetings will be held each month, one for business and the other for social and literary purposes. The Executive Board will meet on the first Monday in each month.

A GRAND SUCCESS.

In spite of the heavy rain which visited this part of the country last Saturday evening, the entertainment and dance given by the ladies of St. Francis' church at Union Hall, was well attended. Every seat was taken and standard room was at a premium. The program was excellent and was thoroughly enjoyed by an appreciative audience. Every one on the program came in for long and loud applause, and the end of the entertainment came much too soon for the delighted audience. The dance which followed was much enjoyed, and continued until 12 o'clock Saturday night. The ladies of the church are to be congratulated on the success of their undertaking, which was as great a success as could be wished for, under the most favorable conditions.

Medals for Sonoma Wines.

Santa Rosa Has a Woman Blacksmith.

Santa Rosa has a woman blacksmith. She has the distinction of being the only female interested in the way of the forge in the state. Of the latter she is proud, and amid the sparks and smoke, the din of the ringing anvil and the other noisy accessories to the trade, she is divinely happy. From morn till night, except for a short time while the domestic duties of the home claim her attention she remains hard at work in the little smithy on First street, helping her husband. She is Mrs. Serini Ann Faber, wife of C. F. Faber. She is a helpmeet to her husband in the fullest sense. He is a blacksmith, also. "She's pretty handy, you bet," said he, as he gazed admiringly at his wife, who was at that particular moment making the sparks fly from a plowshare she was welding.

Mrs. Faber, "the woman blacksmith," as the neighbors say, is a strong, muscular woman. She is about forty-nine years of age, maybe less, for of course, like majority of the women she is a trifle reticent about her years. In the words of the poem it can be said that "the muscles of her brawny arms are strong like iron bands." She is an expert with the welding of the sledge, assists in all kinds of work, such as helping to build wagons, setting tires, and is an expert handler of the wood plane. In fact there is nothing in the business but what she can take a hand in.

It must not be assumed that Mrs. Faber has assumed the role of blacksmith because she had to. She likes the work and cares nothing for the gossip and interest that a woman blacksmith naturally gives rise to.

Yes, I know it is somewhat of a novelty for a woman to work in a blacksmith shop as I do, but I like it, just the same." She likes to help her husband, too. Again returning to the poem, "the poem 'the children coming home from school love to look in at the open doorway' of C. F. Faber's smithy on First street and see this woman working diligently. She has not brought herself yet to where a leather apron is part of her attire. She modestly remarks that she has not such an apron yet, but considers that one of the old-fashioned bib aprons is just as good.

They are a hard-working couple. Both Mrs. Faber and her life partner are adventurists and on Saturdays the padlock is clasped on the smithy door and not a sound is heard from within.

A Startling Surprise.
Very few could believe in looking at A. T. Hoadley, a healthy, robust blacksmith of Tilden, Ind., that for ten years he suffered such tortures from Rheumatism as few could endure and live. But a wonderful change followed his taking Electric Bitters. "Two bottles wholly cured me," he writes, "and I have not felt a twinge in over a year. They regulate the Kidneys, purify the blood and cure Rheumatism, Neuralgia, Nervousness, improve digestion and give perfect health. Try them. Only 50c. at Dr. R. Shoults' drug store.

THE NEW RAILROAD.

President A. W. Foster of the California Northwestern Railway chatted pleasantly with a Press Democrat representative at the Santa Rosa depot Wednesday night concerning the extension of the road from Ukiah north to Willits in Mendocino county. He arrived in Santa Rosa on Wednesday evening's train and was en route to the scene of operations. With the continuation of good weather President Foster says the railroad will reach Willits in a few days.

"It is a fine piece of road," said Mr. Foster, who seemed perfectly satisfied with the success attending its construction. He predicted the operation of the new section of railroad would benefit not only Mendocino but Sonoma county as well. It will open up a big volume of business. Unless pressing engagements forbid Mr. Foster may remain north until the railroad into Willits is completed.—Democrat.

The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages, and that is Catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. Over 150 Eldredge Bicycles Are Running Sonoma in County

The Eldredge Bicycle is Always Ahead
Five years written guarantee for bearings and sprockets on every first class Eldredge Wheel including the wheels already in use.
C. W. Miller, the world's champion for six day races, keeps the world's championship on an Eldredge since 1897. He broke his own record three times on an Eldredge. Now the Eldredge is only the second year on the coast and Mr. E. B. Wastle of San Jose broke the coast record for 10 miles on the Eldredge on May 10th at the Hayward course, making the distance in 21 minutes and 54 seconds. I invite every bicycle rider to inspect the World's Champion's Eldredge bicycle which he rode in all the six day single races and on which he made 36,000 miles. What other wheel would stand the test? We think none, if we may use the expression, even if they have been running for 6 or 7 years, and the same wheel is fit for another 36,000 as it is in perfectly good running order. Look at Eldredge quality before you content yourself with less. The Eldredge is not controlled by the Trust.

FROM POORHOUSE TO PALACE

BY MARY J. HOLMES

CHAPTER X.

It was beginning to be daylight in the city of Boston, and as the gray east gradually brightened and grew red in the coming day, a young man looked out upon the busy world around him with that feeling of utter loneliness which one so often feels in a great city where all is new and strange to him. Scarcely four weeks had passed since the notes of a tolling bell had fallen sadly upon his ear, and he had looked into a grave where they laid his mother to her last dreamless rest. A prevailing fever had effected what the fancied ailments of years had failed to do, and Billy Bender was now an orphan and alone in the wide world. He knew that he had his own fortune to make, and after settling his mother's affairs and finding there was nothing left for him, he had come to the city, and on this morning went forth alone to look for employment, with no other recommendation than the frank, honest expression of his handsome face.

"It was foolish in me to attempt it," thought he, as he stopped in front of a large wholesale establishment. His eye caught the sign on which was lettered "R. J. Selden & Co." The name sounded familiar, and something whispered to him to enter. He did so, and meeting in the doorway a tall, elegant looking young man, he asked for Mr. Selden.

"My uncle," returned the gentleman, who was none other than George Moreland, "has not yet come down, but perhaps I can answer your purpose just as well. Do you wish to purchase goods?"

"Billy, thinking that everyone must know his poverty, fancied there was something satirical in the question, but he was mistaken; the manner was natural to the speaker, who, as Billy made no direct reply, again asked: 'What would you like, sir?'"

"Something to do; for I have neither money nor home," was Billy's prompt answer.

"Will you give me your name?" asked George.

Billy complied, and when he spoke of his native town George repeated it after him, saying: "I have some acquaintances who spend the summer at your place, but you probably have never known them."

Immediately Billy thought of the Lincolns, and now knew why the name of Selden seemed so familiar. He had heard Jenny speak of Ida, and felt certain that R. J. Selden was her father.

For a moment George regarded him intently, and then said: "We seldom employ strangers without a recommendation; still, I do not believe you need any. My uncle is a wealthy man, and he has the work may hardly suit you," he added, naming the duties he would be expected to perform, which certainly were rather menial. Still, as the wages were liberal, Billy for want of a better, accepted the situation, and was immediately introduced to his business. For some time he only saw George at a distance, but was told by one of the clerks that he was just graduated at Yale, and was now a junior partner in his uncle's establishment.

"We all like him very much," said the clerk, "he is so pleasant and kind, though a little proud, I guess."

This was all that Billy knew of him until he had been in Mr. Selden's employment nearly three weeks; then, as he was one day poring over a volume of Horace which he had brought with him, George, who chanced to pass by, looked over his shoulder, exclaiming: "Why, Bender, can you read Latin? Really, this is a novelty. Are you fond of books?"

"Yes, very," said Billy, "though I have but a few of my own."

"Fortunately, then, I can accommodate you," returned George, "for I have a tolerably good library, to which you can at any time have access. Suppose you come round to my uncle's to-night. Never mind about thanking me," he added, as he saw Billy about to speak; "I hate to be thanked, so to-night, at eight o'clock, I shall expect you."

Accordingly, that evening Billy started for Mr. Selden's. George, who wished to save him from any embarrassment, answered his ring himself, and immediately conducted him to his room, where for an hour or so they discussed their favorite books and authors. At last, George, astonished at Billy's general knowledge of men and things, exclaimed: "Why, Bender, I do believe you are almost as good a scholar as I, who have been brought to college. Pray, how does it happen?"

In a few words Billy explained that he had been in the habit of working summers and going to school at Willbraut's winters; and then, as it was nearly ten, he hastily gathered up the books which George had kindly loaned him and took his leave. As he was descending the broad stairway he met a young girl fashionably dressed, who stood at him in some surprise. In the upper hall she encountered George, and asked him who the stranger was.

"His name is Bender and he came from Chicopee," answered George.

"Bender from Chicopee?" repeated Ida. "Why, I wonder if it isn't the Billy Bender about whom Jenny Lincoln has gone almost mad?"

"I think not," returned her cousin, "for Mrs. Lincoln would hardly suffer her daughter to mention a poor boy's name, much less to go mad about him."

"But," answered Ida, "he worked on Mr. Lincoln's farm when Jenny was a little girl; and now that she is older she talks of him nearly all the time, and Rose says it would not surprise her if she should some day run off with him."

"Possibly it is the same," returned George. "Anyways, he is very fine looking, and a fine fellow, too, besides being an excellent scholar."

name? Who is he, Bender?"

"He was a little English boy I once loved very much; but he is dead now," answered Billy, and George, with a suddenly awakened curiosity, said:

"Tell me about him and his family, will you?"

Without dreaming that George had ever seen them, Billy told the story of Frank's sickness and death—the noble conduct of his little sister, who, when there was no other alternative, went cheerfully to the poorhouse, winning by her gentle ways the love of those unused to love, and taming the wild mood of a man who had been as cruel as a child. As he proceeded with his story George became each moment more and more interested, and when at last there was a pause, he asked, "And is Mary in the poorhouse now?"

"I have not mentioned her name, and pray how came you to know it?" said Billy in some surprise.

In a few words George related the particulars of his acquaintance with the Howards and then again asked where both Mary and Ella were.

Billy replied that for a few years back Mary had lived with a Mrs. Mason, while Ella, at the time of her mother's death, had been adopted by Mrs. Campbell. "But," said he, "I never think of Ella in connection with Mary, they are so unlike; Ella is proud and vain and silly, and treats her sister with the utmost rudeness, though Mary is far more agreeable and intelligent, and as I think the best looking."

"She must have changed very much," answered George. "For if I remember rightly she was not remarkable for personal beauty."

He was going to say more, when someone slapped him rudely on the shoulder, calling out, "How are you, old fellow, and what is there in Boston to interest such a scapgrace as I am?"

Looking up, Billy saw before him Henry Lincoln, exquisitely dressed, but bearing in his appearance evident marks of dissipation.

"Why, Henry," exclaimed George, "how came you here? I supposed you were drawing lamplight caricatures of some one of the tutors in old Yale. What's the matter? What have you been doing?"

"Why, you see," answered Henry, drawing his cigar from his mouth, "one of the sophs got his arm broken in a row, and as I am so tender-hearted, and couldn't bear to hear him groan, the faculty kindly advised me to leave, and sent me before me a recommendation to the old man. But I fixed 'em. I told 'em he was in Boston, whereas he's in Chicopee, so I just took the letter from the office myself. It reads beautifully. Do you understand?"

All this time Henry had apparently taken no notice of Billy, whom George now introduced, saying he believed they were old acquaintances. With the coolest effrontery Henry took from his pocket a quizzing glass, and, applying it to his eye, said, "I've absolutely stoned, and I'm near-sighted. How long have the old folks been in Chicopee?"

"Several weeks, I think," answered George; and then, either because he wanted to hear what Henry would say, or because of a reawakened interest in Mary Howard, he continued, "By the way, Henry, when you came so unceremoniously upon us, we were speaking of a young girl in Chicopee whom you have perhaps forgotten out ere this, as Bender says she is fine looking."

Henry stroked his whiskers, which had receded far more cultivation than his brains, stuck his hat on one side and answered, "Why, yes, I suppose that in any way it was something of a boy with the fair sex, but really I do not now think of more than one handsome girl in Chicopee, and that is Ella Campbell, but she is young yet, not as old as Jenny altogether too small, try for Henry Lincoln, Esq. But who is the girl?"

Billy frowned, for he held Mary's name as too sacred to be breathed by a young man of Henry Lincoln's character, while George replied:

"Her name is Mary Howard."

"What, the paper?" asked Henry, looking significantly at Billy, who replied: "The same, sir."

"Whew-w!" whistled Henry, prolonging the diaphanous to an unusual length. "Why, she's got two teeth at least a foot long, and her face looks as though she had just been in the vinegar barrel and didn't like the taste of it."

"But, without joking, though, how does she look?" asked George; while Billy made a movement as if he would help the insolent puppy to find his level.

"Well, now, old boy," returned Henry, "I'll tell you honestly that the last time I saw her I was surprised to find how much she was improved. She has swallowed those abominable teeth, or done something with them, and is really quite decent looking."

So saying he took his leave. Just then there was a call for Mr. Moreland, who also departed, leaving Billy alone. "It is very strange that she never told me she knew him," thought he; and then taking from his pocket a neatly folded letter, he again read it through. But there was nothing in it about George, except the simple words, "I am glad you have found a friend in Mr. Moreland. I am sure I should like him, just because he is kind to you."

"Yes, she's forgotten him," said Billy, and that belief gave him secret satisfaction. He had known Mary long, and the interest he had felt in her when a homely, neglected child, had not in the least decreased as the lapse of time gradually ripened her into a fine, intelligent looking girl. He was to her a brother still, but she to him was dearer far than a sister; and though in his letters he always addressed her as such, in his heart he claimed her as something nearer, and yet he had never breathed in her ear a word of love or hinted that it was for her sake he toiled both early and late, hoarding up his earnings with almost a miser's care that she might be educated.

Regularly each week she wrote to him, and it was the receipt of these letters and the thoughts of her that kept his heart so brave and cheerful, as alone and unappreciated, except by George, he worked on, dreaming of a bright future when the great object of his life should be realized.

CONQUERED HER RIVAL.

A Pretty and Pathetic Story of Jenny Lincoln and Her Rival.

We have recently read a beautiful incident. Jenny Lind and Grisel were both rivals for popular favor in London. Both were invited to sing the same night at a court concert before the queen. Jenny Lind, being the younger, sang first and was so disturbed by the fierce, scornful look of Grisel that she was at the point of failure when suddenly an inspiration came to her.

The accompanist was striking the final chords. She asked him to rise and took the vacant seat. Her fingers wandered over the keys in a loving prelude, and then she sang a little prayer which she had loved as a child. She hadn't sung it for years. As she sang she was no longer in the presence of royalty, but singing to loving friends in her fatherland.

Softly at first the plaintive notes floated on the air, swelling louder and richer every moment. The singer seemed to throw her whole soul into that weird, thrilling, plaintive "prayer." Gradually the song died away and ended in a sob. There was a silence—the silence of admiring wonder.

The audience sat spellbound. Jenny Lind lifted her sweet eyes to look into the scornful face that had so disconcerted her. There was no fierce expression now; instead a tearful gleam shone in the long, black lashes, and after a moment, with the impetuosity of a child of the tropics, Grisel crossed to Jenny Lind's side, placed her arm about her and kissed her, utterly regardless of the audience.—Our Dumb Animals.

King of Virginia.

Appropos of the British royal titles a reference to colonial possessions appeared in an English sovereign's designation so long ago as the reign of Queen Elizabeth. The poet Spenser dedicated his "Faerie Queen" to Elizabeth, and then he described her as "Queen of England, France and Ireland and sovereign of the Dominion of Virginia."

It may also be remembered that the Virginians refused to acknowledge Oliver Cromwell's protectorate until he sent a fleet to compel them to do so. Charles II., in return expression of the colonists' loyalty, had himself proclaimed in Virginia on his restoration as "King of Great Britain, Ireland and Virginia." The further statement has been made that Charles caused the arms of Virginia to be quartered with those of England, Ireland and Scotland. Certain it is that they appear so on English coins struck as late as 1773 by order of George III.—Liverpool Post.

THIN AND NERVOUS.

HOW A ST. PAUL WOMAN SUFFERED AWFUL TORTURES.

She Was Afflicted With Rheumatism and Indigestion—Now She Gladly Tells Others How She Was Cured.

From the Pioneer Press, St. Paul, Minn.

Anyone who has suffered from either rheumatism or indigestion can appreciate the condition of a frail woman whose body was racked by the agonies caused by a complication of these diseases. Such was the experience of Mrs. J. T. Sloggy, of 107 East Jassamine street, St. Paul, Minn. Happily she found relief by taking the advice of a friend and now, moved by gratitude for her delivery, she tells others how she was cured. To a reporter she said:

"During the winter of 1898 I suffered very much with rheumatism, being confined to my bed some of the time under a physician's care and unable to do any work. I was also troubled with indigestion. When spring came I was thin and nervous, had a poor appetite and was broken down in health generally. That summer I made a visit to Wisconsin and while there met an old friend, Mrs. Ira Howard, of Big Springs. She said she had been a great sufferer from indigestion and had been completely cured by Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People. I knew her word could be relied on, so I got a box of the pills and commenced taking them. I felt benefited in a few days, but continued to take them for about five months."

"That winter I had no return of the rheumatism, my appetite improved and I gained in flesh and strength. My cure was permanent and I have not taken any of the pills since."

"I have told many how the pills helped me and I sincerely hope that others suffering in the same way may be induced to try Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People."

This statement was sworn to by Mrs. Sloggy before G. E. Sampson, a notary public, at St. Paul. Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People will not only cure rheumatism and indigestion, but are also an excellent specific for such diseases as locomotor ataxia, partial paralysis, St. Vitus' dance, sciatica, neuralgia, nervous headache, the after-effects of the grip, palpitation of the heart, pale and sallow complexion, and all forms of weakness. At all dealers or direct from Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Schenectady, N. Y., fifty cents per box; six boxes, two dollars and fifty cents.

CONSUMPTION.

Nothing Tastes Good

And eating is simply perfunctory—done because it must be. This is the common complaint of the dyspeptic.

If eating sparingly would cure dyspepsia, few would suffer from it long.

The only way to cure dyspepsia, which is difficult digestion, is to give vigor and tone to the stomach and the whole digestive system.

Hood's Sarsaparilla cured the niece of Frank Fay, 108 N. She had tried many other medicines in vain. Two bottles of Hood's Sarsaparilla made her well.

A Turkish Bank Note.

The bill is on imperial green paper, a color held sacred in Turkey, which the government alone is permitted to use. On the top and sides are the following words in Turkish, "To be paid to the bearer, without interest, 20 piasters." At the top of the note is the sultan's toghra, surrounding which is a quotation from the Koran. Underneath are the words, "Twenty piasters, paper money, to be used in the place of gold at the Bank of Constantinople." At the base of the note is the seal of the mint and on the back the seal of the minister of the treasury. The toghra is considered sacred and is guarded by the three highest officials of the mint, whose sole duty is to watch it.

Nut Foods.

Nearly all nuts contain large percentages of nitrogenous constituents and fats. In the nut kernel there is very little waste—in fact, the nourishment is in a concentrated form, and for that reason nuts are best combined or taken with other foods. They are especially valued for their fine, nutty flavor, which is found in no other vegetable food product.

Facts speak louder than words, and the fact remains undisputed that the sale of St. Jacob's Oil is greater than all other remedies for outward application combined. It acts like magic, cures where everything else fails; conquers pain.

The Highest Court.

The Denver Times says that when Tom Bagnell was justice of the peace at Altman, the highest incorporated town in the country, standing 12,000 feet above the sea level, he had occasion to fine a disorderly character $10 and costs. The victim of the operation of justice objected to the finding of the court and announced that he would take an appeal.

"What? Appeal, would you?" asked the astonished court. "You can't come any o' that, now. This is the highest court in the United States, and you can't appeal."

She Was an Observer.

"Did George write to you every day while he was traveling around?"

"Yes, every day."

"What regularly?"

"Yes, but I discovered that every one of the letters was written here in his office before he started, and all he had to do was to drop one in the postoffice wherever he chanced to be."

"And how did you find that out?"

"The 'e' in his office typewriter is broken."—Cleveland Plain Dealer.
